

ABSTRACT

The present invention is a spray cooling thermal management device that cools an electronic component. Liquid coolant is dispensed upon a heated surface containing etched open microchannels.